

Dr. Gary Gettelfinger was born and raised in New Albany, Indiana. A true Hoosier at heart, he received his undergraduate degree from Indiana University in Bloomington. His medical degree was earned at IU School of Medicine in Indianapolis, where he also did his residency. He then went to the Navy for four years to pay off his debt. He started a pain clinic in Okinawa, Japan and continued it in Camp Pendleton in California. In 1995 he returned to Bloomington and has been working as an anesthesiologist and administering anesthesia in the operating room and chronic pain medicine in a pain center. Dr. Gettelfinger's wife is a very active dentist in Bloomington and he has four children going multiple different ways and is very proud of all of them.
